The emphasis at New Day is on creative art. Important learning occurs when a child plans how to fill the space on a paper and learns how to hold the paint brush so it doesn't drip. They learn what colors look like when they are mixed together, how to spread paste to make things stick together and how to hold scissors.....all of these skills and many more, are acquired through creative art. Developmentally appropriate practice teaches us that the "how to" is much more important than "what is" the final product.
